Group Life and Death in Service Pension Insurance

In the event of your death while an eligible employee, a lump sum payment will be made to your beneficiaries. In addition, a death in service pension may be payable to one or more eligible dependents. Your employer will be able to tell you the benefits available to you.

This guide is intended to provide high level factual information about the life insurance available as part of your employer's scheme and not the suitability of the cover for any particular member. For full information please refer to the Registered Group Life Insurance Technical Guide or Policy Terms and Conditions on our website.

How does it work?

Your employer will tell you whether you're eligible for cover. Once you meet the eligibility conditions, you're covered for life insurance and you won't normally be asked to provide medical information. If, for example, your level of benefit is very high, we'll ask you to complete an online questionnaire about your health and lifestyle. Based on your responses, and sometimes on additional evidence or medical tests we might require, we'll decide if cover can be provided and, if so, on what terms.

The life insurance is provided through a trust set up by your employer. In the event of your death while a member of the scheme, any lump sum benefit will be paid to the trustees, who have absolute discretion as to whom benefits are paid, but who will usually pay the benefit to any beneficiaries you've nominated. You can nominate your beneficiaries by completing a nomination of beneficiary form – you should ask your employer how to do this. Any death in service pension benefit will be paid direct by us according to the trustees' instructions.

How long will I be covered for?

You'll have cover for as long as you meet the eligibility conditions - your employer can tell you what these are. If you're absent from work due to illness or injury you'll continue to be covered until you reach the age cover ceases as stated in the Policy Schedule.

If you're absent due to maternity, paternity or adoption leave, cover will continue while you remain eligible for membership of the policy. If you're absent for any other reason cover can continue for a maximum period of three years providing you remain in this employment.

If you remain an employee after you reach the age cover ceases and you continue to meet the eligibility conditions, you'll be required to complete a medical assessment before cover can continue. In any event, the cover can't continue beyond your 75th birthday.

Life cover under this policy ends on the day you leave employment.

Making a claim

Your employer (on behalf of the trustees of the policy) is responsible for making claims under this policy. Lump sum benefit will be paid to the trustees who will decide to whom payments are made, taking into account your wishes as set out in your nomination of beneficiaries form. Where death in service pension benefits are provided (check with your employer if you're unsure), these will normally be paid direct by us to your surviving spouse, partner and/or dependants, according to the trustees' instructions.

Taxation

For Registered Group Life policies, lump sum benefit will count towards your lifetime allowance. Lump sum payments are normally tax free unless your lifetime allowance is exceeded. Death in Service Pension payments don't count towards your lifetime allowance, but the recipients are subject to income tax on the payments they receive.
